1 NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION TO DISMISS

2 TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR COUNSEL OF RECORD:

3 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on May 14, 2009, at 2:30 p.m., before the Honorable Vaughn
4 R. Walker, United States District Chief Judge, in Courtroom 6, 17th floor, 450 Golden Gate Avenue, 5 San Francisco, California, defendants Verizon Communications Inc. and AT&T Corp., and Specially 6 Appearing Defendants AT&T Inc. and BellSouth Corporation¹ (collectively, “carriers” or “carrier 7 defendants”), will move and hereby do move, pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) 8 and 12(b)(6), to dismiss the Complaint (Dkt. 1, Attach. No. 2) filed by Rev. Joe McMurray et al.
9 (“plaintiffs”) challenging the constitutionality of § 802 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act 10 (“FISA”) (added by the FISA Amendments Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-261, 122 Stat. 2436).

11 This motion is made on the grounds that plaintiffs’ Fifth Amendment takings claim (Count 1) 12 is meritless because plaintiffs do not hold a vested property right in their pending, unadjudicated 13 claims against the carrier defendants and this Court lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate the claim; that 14 Plaintiffs’ separation of powers claim (Count 2) fails because § 802 permissibly amended the legal 15 standard underlying the lawsuits brought against the carriers; and that Plaintiffs’ due process claim 16 (Count 3) must be dismissed because the retroactive application of § 802(a) to pending cases is con-17 stitutionally permissible. And, in addition to these arguments made by the Government and in prior 18 briefing in this case, this motion is based on the argument that even if plaintiffs’ claims did not fail 19 in their entirety on the merits, their claims against the carriers must be dismissed because the carri-20 ers are not proper defendants in this action. The carriers are private entities that are not alleged to 21 have taken any relevant action with respect to the passage and application of § 802, much less state 22 action that would implicate constitutional concerns. For similar reasons plaintiffs have no standing 23 to sue the carrier defendants, because the carriers did not cause any harm, and relief against them 24 could not redress any supposed harm.

25 This motion is based on this notice of motion and motion, the memorandum that follows, all 26

¹ AT&T Inc. and BellSouth Corporation are not subject to personal jurisdiction in New York, which 28 is where the complaint was filed. Accordingly, those entities have concurrently filed a separate motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction.

2 Court at or before the hearing on this motion. To minimize duplicative arguments, where possible

4 complaint,² as well as the Government's³ and the carriers'⁴ prior briefing concerning the constitu-5 tionality of the FISA Amendments Act of 2008.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

In 2006, all but one of the plaintiffs in this action, who claim to be current and former subscribers of the carrier defendants, brought a different suit against the carriers seeking monetary damages and injunctive relief for the alleged disclosure of “subscriber conversations, information and records to the United States in violation of the Electronic Communications Privacy Act (ECPA) and the Stored Communications Act.” Compl. ¶ 9, McMurray v. Verizon Commc’ns (No. 09-0131) (“Complaint”) (McMurray Dkt. 1, Attach. 2) (describing the 2006 complaint); see Amended Compl., McMurray v. Verizon Commc’ns Inc., No. 1:06-3650 (S.D.N.Y.) (“2006 Complaint”). By order of the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation (JPML), that lawsuit was transferred to this Court for consolidated pretrial proceedings. See In re NSA Telecomms. Records Litig., 444 F. Supp. 2d 1332, 1335 (J.P.M.L. 2006). It later was among the lawsuits with respect to which the Attorney General submitted a certification and the United States sought dismissal pursuant to § 802 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) (added by the FISA Amendments Act of 2008 (FISAAA), Pub. L. No. 110-261, 122 Stat. 2436). See Dkt. 469. Plaintiffs and their counsel joined in the extensive briefing challenging the constitutionality of § 802, which now is pending before this Court. See MDL Dkts. 482, 524.

18 For reasons passing understanding, in July 2008 these same plaintiffs – represented by the 19 same lawyers – also separately filed an entirely new lawsuit outside of the MDL, in the Southern 20 District of New York, in which they also attacked the constitutionality of § 802. That separate law-21 suit, which the JPML also transferred to this Court, is the subject of this motion to dismiss. Plain-22 tiffs assert three causes of action – that § 802 violates the Takings Clause (Count 1), the separation 23 of powers (Count 2), and due process (Count 3). See Compl. ¶¶ 18-39. They identify only the first 24 of these as presenting anything new. Pls' Opp'n to U.S. Admin. Mot. (Dkt. 7) at 5. In fact, each of 25 the three claims is legally infirm.

For reasons the government already has explained in its Motion to Dismiss, the Complaint should be dismissed in its entirety. First, the McMurray plaintiffs argue that by requiring dismissal of their original 2006 lawsuit, § 802 violates the Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment. Such a

1 challenge, however, can succeed only when the thing that allegedly was “taken” – here, the pending 2 lawsuit – is a property interest that the government may not abridge without paying just compensa-3 tion. The Ninth Circuit, however, and “every circuit court to have addressed the issue[,] has . . .
4 concluded that no vested property right exists in a cause of action unless the plaintiff has obtained a 5 final, unreviewable judgment.” Ileto v. Glock, Inc., 421 F. Supp. 2d 1274, 1299 (C.D. Cal. 2006)
6 (collecting cases). Indeed, in their prior briefing, the MDL plaintiffs, including the McMurray plain-7 tiffs, themselves recognized that the “Takings Clause did not apply to [a] cause of action that had not 8 been reduced to final judgment.” See MDL Pls.’ Reply Br. (Dkt. 524) at 17 n.16. Moreover, as the 9 Government properly explains, even if plaintiffs’ claim for damages were a protected property inter-10 est, this Court lacks the jurisdiction to consider plaintiffs’ takings claim. Second, plaintiffs contend 11 that § 802 trenches upon the judicial function. This cause of action is similarly meritless. Because 12 Congress amended the legal standard underlying the lawsuits brought against the carriers, § 802 13 does not violate the separation of powers. Third, plaintiffs allege that the application of § 802 to 14 pending claims, including the 2006 Complaint, violates due process. But it is black-letter law that 15 Congress may enact legislation affecting claims that have not reached final judgment so long as the 16 law is merely rational. Although plaintiffs clearly disagree with Congress’s policy judgment, they 17 have not alleged – nor could they – that § 802 lacks a rational basis.

18 For all of these reasons, plaintiffs’ claims must be dismissed in their entirety. But plaintiffs’ 19 claims against the carriers are particularly flawed, and so must be dismissed for an additional reason 20 that the government has not discussed – namely, the Complaint does not articulate any cause of ac-21 tion that properly could be brought against the carriers, which are private parties that are not respon-22 sible for enacting or invoking § 802. Nowhere does the Complaint allege that these private defen-23 dants have undertaken any relevant conduct. And it certainly makes no allegation that could support 24 the extraordinary idea that these private entities could “take” plaintiffs’ putative causes of action, 25 deny them due process, or otherwise engage in action that could be deemed “state action.” For 26 closely related reasons, plaintiffs have no standing to sue the carrier defendants – the Complaint 27 does not allege that the carriers took any action that caused the alleged constitutional violations, nor 28 does it seek any relief against the carriers that could redress the supposed injury. Causation and re-

1 dressability are essential components of the “irreducible constitutional minimum of standing,” and 2 they have not and could not be alleged here. Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560
3 (1992). The Complaint must be dismissed.

4 ARGUMENT

5 I. THE COMPLAINT SHOULD BE DISMISSED IN ITS ENTIRETY

6 In the Government’s Motion to Dismiss, and in the prior briefing on the constitutionality of 7 FISAAA, the defendants in the MDL have set forth arguments why the Complaint must be dis-
8 missed. See supra nn.2-4. We incorporate those arguments by reference, and reiterate them briefly 9 here, to preserve them.

10 A. Section 802 Does Not Violate The Takings Clause

11 Plaintiffs contend that their “right to recover” under various statutes, “as expressed through 12 the Pending Actions, are property rights” protected by the Fifth Amendment’s guarantee that the 13 government will not take “private property … without just compensation.” Compl. ¶ 19. This claim 14 must be dismissed in its entirety for at least two reasons.

15 First, as the Government has explained, the dismissal of plaintiffs’ pending lawsuit seeking 16 money damages from carriers would not as a matter of law constitute a taking. See U.S. McMurray 17 Motion 4-7. “The Fifth Amendment’s Takings Clause prevents the Legislature . . . from depriving 18 private persons of vested property rights except for a ‘public use’ and upon payment of ‘just com-
19 pensation.’” Landgraf v. USI Film Prods., 511 U.S. 244, 266 (1994) (emphasis added). “[A] party’s 20 property right in any cause of action,” however, “does not vest until a final unreviewable judgment 21 is obtained.” Grimesy v. Huff, 876 F.2d 738, 743-44 (9th Cir. 1989) (internal quotation marks omit-22 ted) (rejecting takings claim); see also U.S. McMurray Motion 4-5 (collecting cases). Plaintiffs’ 23 2006 lawsuit has not reached a final judgment, and so its dismissal by virtue of § 802 could not con-24 stitute a taking.

25 Second, this Court lacks jurisdiction to consider takings claims against the federal govern-26 ment, including those in which declaratory or equitable relief is sought. See U.S. McMurray Motion 27 3-4; Bay View, Inc. v. Ahtna, Inc., 105 F.3d 1281, 1286 n.6 (9th Cir. 1997) (“neither injunctive nor 28 declaratory relief is available for a takings claim against the United States”); Consejo de Desarrollo

1 Economico de Mexicali, A.C. v. United States, 482 F.3d 1157, 1172-73 (9th Cir. 2007). Rather, as 2 the Government has explained, a takings claim is premature when (as here) the plaintiff has not pur-3 pursued just compensation under the Tucker Act. See U.S. McMurray Motion 3-4.

4 B. Section 802 Does Not Violate The Separation Of Powers

5 For the reasons previously set forth (see Carriers' FISAAA Br. 8-14), plaintiffs' claim that 6 § 802 violates the separation of powers (see Compl. ¶¶ 22-35) also must be dismissed. The 7 Complaint principally contends that § 802 violates the separation of powers because it "mandates 8 legislative dismissal of plaintiffs' claims . . . without adjudication by a court." Compl. ¶ 23; see also 9 id. ¶ 35 ("the Act is unconstitutional in that it purports to adjudicate cases and controversies pending 10 before a court of the United States"). This argument, which appears to be based on United States v.
11 Klein, 80 U.S. (13 Wall.) 128 (1871), is without merit.

12 As the carriers' prior brief explains in greater detail (see Carriers' FISAAA Br. 8-10), it is 13 well established that Congress may amend the law applicable to pending cases that have not yet 14 reached final judgment: "[Klein's] prohibition does not take hold when Congress 'amend[s] 15 applicable law'" as opposed to simply prescribing a rule of decision in a particular case. Plaut v.
16 Spendthrift Farm, Inc., 514 U.S. 211, 218 (1995) (quoting Robertson v. Seattle Audubon Soc'y, 503 17 U.S. 429, 441 (1992)). "[I]t is of no constitutional consequence that [legislation] affects, or is even 18 directed at, a specific [case] so long as the legislation modifies the law." Ecology Ctr. v. Castaneda, 19 426 F.3d 1144, 1149 (9th Cir. 2005) (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Robertson, 503 20 U.S. at 434-35. Here, Congress amended the law. Section 802 sets forth an immunity that is 21 available in any case – now or in the future, pending or not yet filed – in which the standards of the 22 section are met.

23 To the extent the McMurray plaintiffs mean to argue that § 802 violates the separation of 24 powers on the theory that it permits the Executive Branch to exercise adjudicatory power, see 25 Compl. ¶ 34, that theory likewise fails. Under § 802, a certification by the Attorney General is 26 subject to judicial review for "substantial evidence." See FISA § 802(b)(1). Judicial review of this 27 sort is common under numerous statutes – most notably, the Administrative Procedure Act – and 28 raises no constitutional concerns. See Carriers' FISAAA Br. 14-15; see, e.g., Noriega-Perez v.

1 United States, 179 F.3d 1166, 1174-78 (9th Cir. 1999) (rejecting Article III challenge to ALJ’s 2 authority to hold administrative hearing and impose fine for document fraud under immigration 3 laws, where Article III court reviewed factual determinations for substantial evidence).

4 C. Section 802 Does Not Violate Due Process

5 Plaintiffs’ due process claim (Count 3) also must be dismissed. It alleges a denial of due 6 process – specifically, that “by interposing defenses that did not exist at the time of the underlying 7 acts of the defendants and that did not exist in law at the time of commencement of the actions, 8 [§ 802] violates . . . due process.” Compl. ¶ 39. The nub of plaintiffs’ claim is that a new law can-9 not constitutionally be applied to the facts underlying a pending lawsuit. But it never has been the 10 case that the filing of a lawsuit insulates it from legislative action. On the contrary, as we have ex-11 plained, Congress may amend existing law in a manner that affects both pending and future litiga-12 tion, so long as a case has not reached final judgment. Plaut, 514 U.S. at 227; see U.S. FISAAA Br.
13 6-10; Carriers’ FISAAA Br. 9-10. And it is equally well-settled that a court must “apply the law in 14 effect at the time it renders its decision even though that law was enacted after the events that gave 15 rise to the suit.” Landgraf, 511 U.S. at 273 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). The ret-16 roactive application of § 802 is fully consistent with due process.

17 Thus, the Ninth Circuit has squarely rejected a similar challenge, holding that “[t]o comport 18 with the requirements of due process, the retroactive application of a statute must be supported by a 19 legitimate legislative purpose furthered by a rational means.” In re Consol. U.S. Atmospheric 20 Testing Litig., 820 F.2d 982, 991-92 (9th Cir. 1987). As the court explained, the “burden is on one 21 complaining of a due process violation to establish that the legislature has acted in an arbitrary and 22 irrational way.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted); see also, e.g., Fields v. Legacy Health Sys., 23 413 F.3d 943, 956 (9th Cir. 2005). It is “well established that legislative Acts adjusting the burdens 24 and benefits of economic life come to the Court with a presumption of constitutionality.” Usery v.
25 Turner Elkhorn Mining Co., 428 U.S. 1, 15 (1976). Here, plaintiffs have not even attempted to 26 make the weighty showing that § 802 is arbitrary or lacks a “rational legislative purpose.” Pension 27 Benefit Guaranty Corp. v. R.A. Gray & Co., 467 U.S. 717, 730 (1984). The product of two years of 28 extensive deliberation, § 802 embodies the bipartisan conclusion that in light of “the unique

1 historical circumstances of the aftermath of September 11, 2001,” private companies that allegedly 2 responded to the Government’s request for assistance and those that did not act at all should not be 3 put to the burden of pending and future litigation, particularly in light of the overwhelming difficulty 4 of defending a lawsuit involving state secrets. S. Rep. No. 110-209, at 8-9, 12 (2007); see U.S.
5 FISAAA Br. 14 n.13; see also Supplemental Br. of Telecommunications Carrier Defendants in 6 Support of the United States’ Motion to Dismiss or, in the Alternative, for Summary Judgment (Dkt.
7 571), at 12-13. Because the retroactive application of § 802(a) to pending cases, see § 802(i), is 8 supported by a legislative purpose that is far more than merely rational, plaintiffs’ due process claim 9 must be dismissed. See Atmospheric Testing, 820 F.2d at 991-92; cf. Logan v. Zimmerman Brush 10 Co., 455 U.S. 422, 432-33 (1982) (“[T]he State remains free to create substantive defenses or 11 immunities for use in adjudication – or to eliminate its statutorily created causes of action 12 altogether In [such a] case, the legislative determination provides all the process that is due.”).

13 II. THE COMPLAINT MUST BE DISMISSED AS AGAINST THE CARRIERS WHICH, 14 AS PRIVATE PARTIES, ARE NOT PROPER DEFENDANTS TO THIS SUIT

15 In addition to these previously-briefed reasons why the Complaint must be dismissed in its 16 entirety, at a minimum the claims must be dismissed as against the carriers for the fundamental 17 reason that these entities are private parties that are not alleged to have undertaken any conduct – 18 much less state action – that is relevant to plaintiffs’ supposed constitutional injury. It is hornbook 19 law that “the conduct of private parties lies beyond the Constitution’s scope in most instances.”
20 Edmonson v. Leesville Concrete Co., 500 U.S. 614, 620 (1991). Relevant here, the Fifth 21 Amendment – and even more obviously the separation of powers doctrine – “applies only to the 22 federal government”; consequently, the carriers “is not restricted” by the relevant constitutional 23 provisions unless they are “part of the federal government or [their] actions constituted federal 24 action.” American Bankers Mortgage Corp. v. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 75 F.3d 1401, 25 1406 (9th Cir. 1996) (affirming dismissal of constitutional claim because the defendant was a private 26 entity not subject to the Fifth Amendment’s Due Process Clause); see generally United States v.
27 International Bhd. of Teamsters, 941 F.2d 1292, 1295 (2d Cir. 1991) (“Because the United States 28 Constitution regulates only the Government, not private parties, a litigant claiming that his

1 constitutional rights have been violated must first establish that the challenged conduct constitutes 2 ‘state action.’”).

3 Here, the only conduct relevant to this Complaint is the passage and invocation of § 802.
4 Compl. ¶ 20 (“By mandating dismissal of the Pending Actions, the Act immunizes the 5 telecommunications carriers for such prior damages without compensation to plaintiffs and without 6 adjudication of their claims, a taking of property . . .”); see also id. ¶ 11 (“The Act, as signed into 7 law by the President on or about July 9, 2008, purports to mandate dismissal of all such pending 8 actions.”); id. ¶ 12 (“Section 802(a) of the Act requires dismissal of the Pending Action . . .”); id.
9 ¶¶ 23, 37. With regard to that conduct, not only have plaintiffs failed to allege that the carriers 10 undertook state action, they do not allege that these defendants took any relevant action whatsoever.
11 Accordingly, these private parties are not proper defendants, and the claims against them must be 12 dismissed. See Pinhas v. Summit Health, Ltd., 894 F.2d 1024, 1034-35 (9th Cir. 1989) (dismissing 13 claims against private parties seeking declaration that laws were unconstitutional); American Bankers, 75 F.3d at 1406; see also Matsuda v. City & County of Honolulu, 512 F.3d 1148, 1150 (9th 14 Cir.) (substantive due process claims concern “state action”), cert. denied, 128 S. Ct. 2964 (2008); 15 Flagg v. Yonkers Sav. & Loan Ass’n, FA, 396 F.3d 178, 186 (2d Cir. 2005) (affirming dismissal; 16 defendant “was not a ‘state actor’ for purposes of evaluating the legal merits of the [plaintiff’s] 17 takings claim.”); Tancredi v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 316 F.3d 308, 313 (2d Cir. 2003) (affirming 18 dismissal of takings claim against corporation; complaint failed to “show that [corporation’s alleged 19 action] was conduct that was fairly attributable to the State.”); Bajwa v. Sunoco, Inc., 320 F. Supp.
20 2d 454, 459 (E.D. Va. 2004) (“[T]he takings clause does not provide for a cause of action against a 21 private party.”).⁵

22 For the same reasons, plaintiffs’ claims also must be dismissed for lack of standing. To sat-23 isfy the “case or controversy” requirement of Article III, plaintiffs bear the burden of establishing 24 that (1) they “suffered an injury in fact that is concrete and particularized, and actual or imminent;

25
26
27
28

⁵ In the unlikely event the takings claim survived a motion to dismiss, the carriers reserve their statutory right to submit briefing. See FISA § 802(d) (“Any . . . defendant in a civil action . . . shall be permitted to participate in the briefing or argument of any legal issue in a judicial proceeding conducted pursuant to this section.”).

(2) the injury is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct; and (3) the injury is likely to be redressed by a favorable court decision.” Salmon Spawning & Recovery Alliance v. Gutierrez, 545 F.3d 1220, 1225 (9th Cir. 2008) (emphases added). Even if plaintiffs had suffered a cognizable injury, but cf. supra at 6-7, they have not alleged any causal connection between conduct by the carrier defendants and their supposed injury. Salmon Spawning, 545 F.3d at 1225. And with good reason: Section 802 is triggered when the government, not a private entity, certifies the requisite facts, and a federal district court finds them supported by substantial evidence. See FISA § 802(a) (a “civil action . . . shall be promptly dismissed, if the Attorney General certifies to the district court” that at least one of the five criteria in § 802(a) has been met); id. § 802(b)(1). The constitutional requirement of redressability is similarly lacking. No relief awarded against the carrier defendants could possibly remedy the supposed constitutional violations. The plaintiffs themselves appear to recognize this, as they do not even seek relief against the carriers; they only ask the Court to “enjoin[] the United States from enforcing said provisions of the Act.” Compl. 17 ¶ 1.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Complaint should be dismissed.
